Tip

Anden's Renovation Tip: Cleaning Grout

The common misconception is that a strong cleaner is necessary to get all the dirt out of the grout. Grout can break down if an alkaline product, such as vinegar is used. Alkaline may eat away at the grout. This is not a recommended method.

If you have mold and mildew, it is not likely to be the fault of the grout. The fault will lie in the substrate material behind the tile. If water penetrates through and the substrate gets wet, mold will start to grow and come through your tile. Materials used in a typical tile installation are not naturally prone to support any kind of mold or mildew, which is why tile is used in such areas as commercial showers.

If you do have mold/mildew currently, Bleach, high pH cleaners or heavy duty strippers can kill the organisms. If you use a deep clean like this, we can not emphasize enough how important it is to rinse very thoroughly with CLEAN water. The area must be allowed to DRY THOROUGHLY and a good sealer applied to the grout with 24 hours. Sealant may be reapplied once a year.

For regular maintenance, a neutral cleaner made specifically for grout and tile should be used, and remember to rinse well. Nylon or plastic scrubbers generally won't scratch your surface. Good tile cleaners can be found at your tile retailer. You can also find good weekly maintenance products at your hardware store such as Mr. Clean and Spic and Span.
